AT CAPITAL

Members of Senate and House
Military Committees to Be Witnesses at Ceremony

FUNCTION HAS BEEN
REHEARSED BY CROWDER

Numbers Drawn Will Be Flashed
by Telegraph to All Points of the United States

TOMORROW MORNING.
Washington, D. C., July 19.—At 9:30 o'clock (eastern time) tomorrow morning in a committee room of the senate office building has been fixed as the time and place for the war drawing.

Washington, July 19.—War department officials were confident today that the lottery for the selection of registrants for the new national army will be held tomorrow. Three states, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan, have failed to announce completion of local exemption machinery, but returns are expected by tonight.

The drawing, according to present plans, will be held at the capitol, with members of the senate and house military committees as witnesses. The identity of the person who is to draw the numbers has not yet been divulged, but prevalent reports credit the duty to Secretary Baer. Rehearsals of the drawing held under the supervision of Provost Marshal General Crowder indicate that the proceeding will be completed in about an hour.

Press associations and telegraph companies are today completing final details of the method to be used in flashing the outcome of the news to all sections of the country. Special efforts are being made to insure both speed and accuracy in transmission.

COAL OPERATOR
CONFESSES TO THREE MURDERS

Johnstown, Pa., July 19.—George T. Tompkins of Philadelphia, held in connection with the shooting to death of Edmund I. Humphreys, prominent coal operator, his wife and their son, on a country road near Carrolltown last Sunday, confessed to the three murders today, according to the police.

COURT UPHOLDS LID ORDER OF SAFETY BOARD

St. Paul, Minn., July 19.—The authority of the Minnesota safety public commission was upheld by a decision handed down by Judge Wilbur Booth in the United States district court, denying the prayer of Ethel Cook, a Canadian citizen, and saloon-keeper in Minneapolis, for an injunction restraining the commission and city officials from enforcing the commission's order requiring all saloons to be closed between 10 p. m. and 8 a. m. Attacks upon the constitutionality of the law creating the commission and on the order itself as a legislative act rather than one of administration, failed in the opinion of Judge Booth. He approved the act of the commission as a war measure.

WILSON PARDONS
UNRULY PICKETS

Washington, July 19.—President Wilson today issued pardons to the 16 suffragists who are serving 60-day sentences in the workhouse at Occoquan, Va., for picketing in front of the White House.

Secretary Tumulty said the pardon must speak for itself and that the White House would have no statement to make of the president's reasons for his action.

Women's party leaders expressed surprise at the president's action and declared picketing of the White House would continue despite the president's action.

PEDDLERS DISTRIBUTING COMMODITY ARRESTED

Kansas City, Mo., July 19.—Federal chemists and bacteriologists were preparing today to inoculate guinea pigs with cultures obtained from specimen courtplaster, believed to be impregnated with tetanus germs, and alleged by the authorities to have been distributed throughout Kansas by peddlers as a part of a plot to plunge the state into an epidemic of disease.

Whether the alleged plot was believed to have been of Germanic origin was not disclosed by the attorney general of Kansas, in charge of the investigation. Their identity has not been disclosed nor has the place of their detention been announced. The latter move was declared to have been taken to prevent any mob action.

The courtplaster under suspicion, which was sold or given away, was put up in the conventional flat package.

The first possible fatality from such a plot was reported here last night from Winfield, Kan., where a man died after treating an apparently harmless sore on his leg with courtplaster, and poisoning his entire system as the result.

GOOD TURN FOR EVERY BAD ONE
SAYS SERGEANT

Member of Famous "Black Devils" Who Saw Service at Ypres Guest in Bismarck

TELLS BOYS WHAT TO EXPECT AT FRONT

There is a good turn for every bad one in the trenches," is the message Sergeant Ernest Langford of the famous "Black Devils" regiment of Winnipeg brings to the North Dakota boys who before many months have passed may be standing in the trenches at Ypres or charging over "No Man's Land."

He is here today en route to Hunters Hot Springs to take treatment for injuries inflicted by two gas attacks which incapacitated him for further military duty.

Sergeant Langford can tell of the horrors of war but he delights more to dwell upon the brighter side of active service on the French front. He was through the bloody action at Ypres, the battle of the Marne and the first phase of the battle of the Somme.

Adopted by Troops.
He was adopted at once by the troops at Fort Lincoln, where he took dinner and told the boys some of the difficulties they must face and some of the joys too, that come from serving your country.

"The war is practically won now," said Sergeant Langford. "The Germans won't come out of the trenches and fight like men. We have to go after them and dig them out like rats out of holes. In a straight stand-up fight, one Tommy is equal to several Germans."

"Let the boys who are going realize that they must keep their heads and obey their officers implicitly and forget all they think they know about military tactics. This war is different. Nothing is done as it was done in past wars. You have to learn the game all over."

Work of Red Cross.
"I want especially to commend the work of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and the Salvation army. They are doing a grand work for the boys. When you are wounded the first sight that meets you at the emergency station is the Red Cross. They give you a large brown bag with a Red Cross on it and in it are all the little things that add to the joy of living. They examine the tag about your neck and notify kin and friends of the nature of your injuries and the hospital you are in."

"To the boys who cannot go to the front I want to tell them through your columns that they should devote a portion of their wages each month to the Red Cross. Help the fellow that goes to fight your fight. People here do not realize the changes that this war has brought about in England."

Slacker Despised.
The slacker in England is despised. No girl who honors herself will be seen walking with a man not clad in khaki or wearing the conspicuous shield of exemption. Soldiers are given the greatest consideration and (Continued on page five)

GREAT LOTTERY

Provost Marshal General Makes Clear Every Detail of Drafting for Army

EACH NUMBER DRAWN TO REPRESENT BIG SERIES

If 25 Selected Will Represent
Each Numeral So Ending
Up to 10,025

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Ten million men are registered in the United States for war service—857,000 are needed in the first call for the national army. Who shall go first?

This question is asked and the method by which it is to be answered was outlined by Provost Marshal General Crowder in an explanation issued today of the great drawing about to be held in Washington. The scheme evolved is so simple that the drawing of one set of 1,000 numbers and another of 11 will fix with absolute equality of chance the order in which every one of the 10,000,000 registrants shall report to his local board for examination and subsequent exemption, discharge or acceptance for military service.

Average Exemption.
Since the average exemption district registration is 3,000 and there are 4,557 districts, the average number of men listed with each operation of the drawing machinery will be about 10,000.

General Crowder announced also that local boards will be instructed to call 200 per cent of their quota at the first call to provide for probable exemptions. That means that 1,374,000 men will be notified to appear for examination within the next few days. If more are necessary they will be called for as needed by the local boards in the order provided for in the drawing.

In some districts the 100 per cent allowance for exemption may be too large, and in others too small, but the local boards will be instructed to continue calling for men until the district quota is filled. Each state governor is now allotting to his districts their respective portions of the state's quota.

In each of the 4,557 exemption districts among which the ten million registrants have been divided, the cards have been given serial numbers. The number of registrants in each district varies from about 185 in the smallest to more than 10,000 in the largest, so that the serial numbers to be dealt with in the drawing range from 1 to between nine and ten thousand.

In order to reduce the mechanical process and make it possible for the 1,000 numbers drawn to reach every man in every district, a so-called master key has been devised. This will be obtained by drawing slips numbered from naught to nine, which will be listed in the order they are drawn to form the key.

Manner of Application.
Then will begin the drawing of the numbers one to one thousand. For the district with not more than 1,000 registrants there will be no problem to determine the order of appearance before the exemption board. The number drawn first will fix the man whose card bears that serial number as the first to appear before his board in the district with only 185 registrants, the 185 will be on the table for appearance in the order in which their numbers are drawn, and when a number higher than that appears, the district, of course, will not be affected.

Application of the master key makes it possible to apply fairly each of the 1,000 numbers drawn to districts with more than one thousand registrants. As a number is drawn, it will be added to each of the thousand in excess of 1,000 in each district.

In his explanation of the process and of the reason for fixing the order of liability for all of the men when only 857,000 are needed General says:

Order of Examination.
"If we were dealing with the ancient draft, we should take every fourteenth man. We are not conscripting. We are selecting for military service those whose civil service can best be spared."

NEW CRISIS IN RUSSIA IS NOW
UNDER CONTROL

Leniency of Government in Not Quelling Uprising Helps Toward a Solution

NO DESIRE TO MAKE MARTYRS OF REBELS

Apparent That New Regime Has Loyalty of People and Can Put Down Opposition

Petrograd, July 19.—An agreement between the soldiers and workmen's deputies and the remaining members of the cabinet, the question of replacing the retiring minister, as well as all questions of policy, has been held in abeyance pending the suppression of the Bolshevik element, which for 36 hours has kept the city in a turmoil.

Events since noon today serve somewhat to clear up the anomalous situation growing out of the apparent reluctance of the government to mobilize its forces to quell the turbulent minority and radical element. The government evidently considers it unwise for the safety of the city to oppose them with violent methods until it is absolutely necessary.

No Desire to Martyrize.
The government adopted the same course to the socialist, Lunine, some weeks ago, realizing that the movement had little sympathy with the majority of the population and decided it better not to martyrize the Maximalist faction, or to run the risk of precipitating a serious clash with the possibilities of far-reaching consequences.

There is little doubt that the government has enough loyal support to suppress an uprising. There were all signs tonight that pressure would be asserted. The Prebuzhsky regiment, which is known to be faithful to the government, made its appearance on the streets, and though no clash occurred, it stood in readiness if necessary to fight. A note about the streets, there was no doubt in the minds of the people that it was evident that the anti-governmental demonstration took a more serious turn. The regiment was cheered as it passed.

It met several troops of the Bolsheviks, but in no case were the soldiers molested by them. A letter from General Brusiloff, chief of staff, states that Nikolai Lenine, the radical socialist leader, is an agent of the German general staff.

Shots Exchanged.
Owing to reports of an intended attack on Tauride palace for the purpose of arresting Skoloff, minister of labor, M. Tseretelli, minister of posts and telegraph, and M. Tcherloff, minister of agriculture, the military authorities sent two light gunnery units en route to machine gun regiments. Shots were exchanged and some forces were killed. A posse of infantry stationed at the Champ de Mars, scene of the military reviews, fired on the rascals from Pavlovsk.

M. Tseretelli, minister of posts and telegraph, said yesterday the general assembly of workmen and soldiers and peasants would be held at Moscow, in order to prevent the interference from an irresponsible section of the Petrograd garrison.

The government controls the city today, completely as the Bolsheviks appeared to control it yesterday. Another member of the Russian provisional government, M. Puryeloff, who held the portfolio of justice, resigned today.

A Reuters dispatch from Petrograd says the number of killed and wounded in the two days' rioting there is estimated at about 50.

VICTORY FOR PEOPLE, IS CHOICE OF GERMANY'S NEW CHANCELLOR

DR. GEORG MICHAELIS
Washington, D. C., July 19.—Dr. Georg Michaelis, new chancellor of Germany, has had a varied official experience, accounting for his leadership in the Prussian fight for electoral reforms.

He was born Sept. 8, 1877, in Hainau, Schleswig, son of justice of the last appeal. After holding local offices of justice and assessor he was appointed in 1887, state attorney at Berlin, whence he was called to the school of justice and politics at Tokyo. At the end of 1889 Dr. Michaelis returned to Germany and was state attorney transferred in 1892 to the government service in Trier, Treves.

RAILWAY PRESIDENT
INSISTS UPON BOND

Minot, N. D., July 19.—President Edmund Pennington and the local agent of the Soo Line, J. G. Helander, faced the charge brought against them jointly by Dan Brennan, assistant attorney general of the state of North Dakota in Justice A. B. Dills court last night waiving examination, and were bound over to the district court on a charge of bootlegging and to the county court on a charge of importing intoxicating liquor into the state for sale as a beverage.

Mr. Pennington came through the city on a tour of inspection and arrived here at 9 o'clock last evening. Court was called immediately and the session held in the local offices of the Soo Line. Attorney Brennan appeared for the state and the attorney for the defendants had bonds in the sum of $1,000 in each case ready. Justice Dills stated that he did not care to ask for bonds but Pennington asserted that he wanted the matter handled in the ordinary manner and the bonds were filed. After the hearing Attorney Brennan made the following statement:

Press reports stating the charge against President Pennington is personal are incorrect. He is charged with personal responsibility for the matters in question just as any other defendant is charged in a criminal action. The statement recently made to the press by counsel for the Soo Line, Minneapolis, to the effect that the Soo Line and its agents were thrown open to prosecuting officers is also incorrect. The law gives North Dakota prosecuting officers a right to search the records without consent of the authorities. The trouble with the Soo Line is over the refusal of the Soo agent to respond to a subpoena and to a court statement that the Soo would not assist in swelling any sort of a subpoena. The law gives the state a right to search the records of the Soo Line, and we were thus confirmed in the opinion (Continued on page three)

INSIST ON PEACE.
Amsterdam, July 19.—The Berlin Tageblatt says the committee of the majority parties in the German reichstag have unanimously decided the peace resolution. Previously the committee was divided, two members of the center and one liberal opposing the majority. The Tageblatt says that in the reichstag 221 deputies will vote for the peace resolution.

By Associated Press.)
While the world today awaited with keen interest the declaration of the German policy, which the new imperial chancellor, Dr. Georg Michaelis, is expected to deliver in the reichstag, the military forces of the belligerents are engaged in infantry operations of major proportions only along the eastern front in Galicia, where the Russian onrush apparently is being driven into the Galician village of Volyn, south of Katusz and now occupy the eastern end of that place.

Otherwise, the French front in northern France prevents the most notable features of interest. Few days pass without an effort on the part of the Germans to get back some of the valuable territory wrenched from them in the spring offensives, or to make local inroads elsewhere on the French lines.

A new field was chosen for an attempt of this sort last night, the first really sharp attack for sometime in the field of the great Hindenberg retreat of last March, being delivered to the south of St. Quentin.

The crown prince chose a front nearly half a mile in extent, where the French occupied a hillcock to the east of Chauchy. General Petain's forces were taken aback at first by the intensity of the drive and yielded some ground in the first line. They rallied quickly, however, and drove the Germans out of the greater part of the occupied positions.

Drastic Measures.
The situation in Petrograd continues troubled, but the provisional government has decided to take hold with a firm hand and have it out with the ultra extreme elements, which are keeping the city in a turmoil. Martial law has been established and drastic measures seem to be the order of the day.

Meanwhile, the cabinet council is considering proposals to transfer the seat of government to Moscow to remove it from the scene of turmoil.

STILL DEBATE
FOOD BILL

Washington, July 19.—The senate began work on the food control bill today under a rule limiting speeches to ten minutes but with the leaders determined to expedite consideration preparatory to the final vote on Saturday.

After the time the senate convened but one of the numerous amendments awaited action, including the one evolved in conference as a compromise had been disposed of. More rapid progress was expected today.

Continuation of government control legislation in the food bill to food, seed and fuel including kerosene and gasoline was forecast today, when in what was regarded as a test vote, the senate rejected 24 to 48 an amendment by senator Kenyon of Iowa, to extend control to iron ore and its products hemp binding twine and farm implements and tools.

Implied endorsement was given H. C. Hoover today by the senate, when by a viva voce vote it rejected an amendment by Senator Reed of Missouri to have the food control bill administered by a board of five instead of three members.

"WISCONSINIZE"
NORTH DAKOTA,
CONNOLLY PLAN

Would Bring in Small Farmers,
Cows, Pigs and Chickens
From Eastern States

Bismarck, N. D., July 19.—Plans of the C. Connolly, manager of the Lakes Region Immigration association to "Wisconsinize" North Dakota by bringing in farmers who will till smaller tracts in a more intensive manner and who will introduce more pigs, more dairy cattle and more chickens, met with general favor at a mass meeting held at the local opera house and it is probable that this community will go in on a district organization which Mr. Connolly purposes to form. The immigration agent called attention to the fact that in March 1917 families from the Mississippi valley passed through North Dakota on the Great Northern into Montana. His idea is to stop a large percentage of these farmers in North Dakota, where they are closer to home and nearer the Twin City markets.

Says First Infantry Is in Fine
Shape Except for Lack of Equipment

Grand Forks, N. D., July 19.—Col. J. H. Frankie of the First North Dakota regiment arrived in the city yesterday from his home at Grafton and viewed the drills of Company M and the machine gun company at the fair grounds last evening. He will return to his home this morning.

Colonel Frankie stated last evening that he had no information relative to the possible movements to be made by the guard companies and until government orders were received it will not be definitely known just where the local lads will be taken for general mobilization.

When speaking of the condition of the First North Dakota, Colonel Frankie stated that all companies were in good condition, with the exception of a big shortage in equipment. The large number of enlistments has drained all local sources, and it is not known just how soon the condition can be remedied. The companies are somewhat handicapped by the shortage, but supplies have been ordered and Colonel Frankie is looking forward to an early arrival of the needed equipment.

USE
UPON HONOR HOUSE PAINT

In buying a house paint, quality should always be the first consideration. Misguided people will very often buy a low-priced, inferior paint, in the belief that they are saving money, but in truth, the painting materials cost them just as much because more gallons are required. Sometimes a gallon of good paint will do the work of two or three of the cheap paint, and in the end, the cost of the good paint would be sufficient.

"Honor House" Paint for real merit is evidenced by any color, whatever the name or price of reputation. It is a high grade paint in the fullest sense of the term—a paint possessing great durability, clear tone colors, and a fine, even, and lasting finish.

We fully guarantee the durability.

'Y. O.' Shorthorns From Logan
County Ranch Fulfill Prediction of $14 Cattle

Burnstad, N. D., July 19.—"Y. O." Shorthorns from the Burnstad ranch for the fourth time have topped the Chicago market. The cattle, marketed by T. J. Gunderson of South Dakota, averaged 1,092 pounds for the 40 head, and of the lot the Drovers' Journal says: "Prediction of $14 cattle on the Chicago market was made good today when 40 head, comprising the top cut from a 20-car train of ripe, long-legged bullocks from the feed lots of T. J. Gunderson, Turner county, S. D., were sent over the scales at this new market figure. The $14 cattle, which were branded 'Y. O.', were North Dakota Shorthorns of very high grade and showing, probably, as high a finish as any bullocks here since the stock show last December, were taken by P. D. Armour." Sales of the remainder of the cattle shipment were made as follows: 55 steers of 1,522 pounds at $12.85; 56 steers of 1,719 at $12.85; 25 steers of 1,482 at $13.75; and 22 steers of 1,482 at $13.75. All of these cattle were North Dakota Shorthorns and Herefords, bought by Mr. Gunderson at the Y. O. ranch in Logan county, last October. Burnstad is proud of the boost it has given North Dakota as a state for feeders, and especially of the prowess of C. P. Burnstad, proprietor of the 'Y. O.' as a judge in the selection of quality stock.

Circus Tents To Be Pitched
In Bismarck Saturday

Stephen Batty and two of the race performing lions to be seen in the steel arena of the Barnes circus, July 21.

The Al G. Barnes circus will arrive in Bismarck Saturday. Circus fairs are wild with excitement for they remember well the treat afforded them at their last appearance by the thousands of animals who performed their assigned acts with a skill and exactness akin to human.

The all posters, press agents and personal hosts of this unusually interesting circus have each and all done their share toward making the circus day an event in Bismarck.

That then, kids will be on the street to greet the great glittering parade that shows its open doors of animals with their trainers, is a foregone conclusion. The "Call of the Calliope" is as great a lure to the youngsters of today as it was of old, and it is hard to tell just where the demarcation of the younger or babes and maturity begins when the magic word circus is mentioned.

There is scarcely a prettier sight than that presented by a father and his son taking in the wonders of this tented exhibition has to offer, or of a

DEER BREAKS NECK
Frightened by Motorcar, Plunges
Into Wire Fence

Milton, N. D., July 19.—Frightened by a motor car driven by Albert Ganssle, a young deer, after a mad race with the machine in a country road near Milton, broke its neck by running into a fence at the roadside.

Little Holland Could Be Straw That Would Break Germany's Back

By MILTON BRONNER.
Washington, July 19.—Behind the immediate purpose of the food and necessities embargo, to cut Germany off absolutely from outside supply and thus starve her and cripple her industries, lies the ultimate purpose of forcing the neutrals into war on the Allies' side.

At first thought, Holland and Norway seem unimportant small countries, with small armies, all needed to repel German invasion. But that is merely the superficial aspect. The large strategic possibilities of these countries, particularly Holland, would make their entry of only slightly less consequence than that of the United States.

England, France and the United States, a well known authority on military affairs tells me, "ought well to have Holland a billion in cash guarantee unshipped munitions and back up her army with a half million troops to secure Holland as a base for military, naval and aerial operations against Germany."

"Look at the map and see why Holland would be a lance point thrust into the very heart of Germany. The heart of Germany is the Westphalia district—the Iron Country—where Germany's great munition plants are located.

Germany would face this terrible situation.

"First, her army would be threatened from the rear from the Belgian coast to Verdun, her lines of communication would be in danger, and there would be no safety in a retreat which stopped short of complete evacuation of Belgian and French soil.

"Second, Essen, with the great Krupp plants, Grefeld, Barmen and other important munition centers, all less than 40 miles from the Holland border, would be within 20 minutes airplane flight and subject to constant bombing.

"Third, the Kiel canal, less than 100 miles away, would be subject to constant destructive air raids.

"Fourth, the British navy, using the Dutch coast as a base, would seriously threaten Heligoland and force the coast to restrict their activities to the North sea and the Atlantic.

"Finally, Germany would have a new set of lines, more than 200 miles long, to defend. This would call for a million German troops, obtainable only by calling out the last reserves and weakening the French and Russian fronts to the breaking point.

"There is, of course, danger that Holland, forced into the war, may go with Germany, but the chances are so great she will side with the Allies, and the advantages are so enormous that the Allies are more than justified in running the risk.

Young Farm Hand Convicted of Grand Larceny Makes Pathetic Plea for Pardon

Jamestown, N. D., July 19.
Warden of Penitentiary,
Bismarck, N. D.

Dear Sir:
I am written for them papers that you have up there for Jacob Meckle. Dear Sir send them papers at once I have a sick sister at home, and they told me if I like to see her then I have to come home at once so please be kind and send them papers at once. Because I can come home not before you sent them papers from Bismarck.

JACOB MECKLE,
c/o Sheriff Ross.

Jacob Meckle, alias Gus Brown, of Montpelier, sentenced to spend four years in the state penitentiary on a charge of grand larceny, is the author of this plea to members of the state board of pardons.

Gus was employed by a farmer near Montpelier as a farm hand. Five pigs owned by a neighboring farmer persisted in visiting the farm where Gus was employed, doing considerable damage about the premises. Exasperated by the constant visits of the unsuspicious porkers, Gus' employer, before leaving the farm one day in April, instructed Gus to get rid of the invaders, meaning naturally, that he should drive them away.

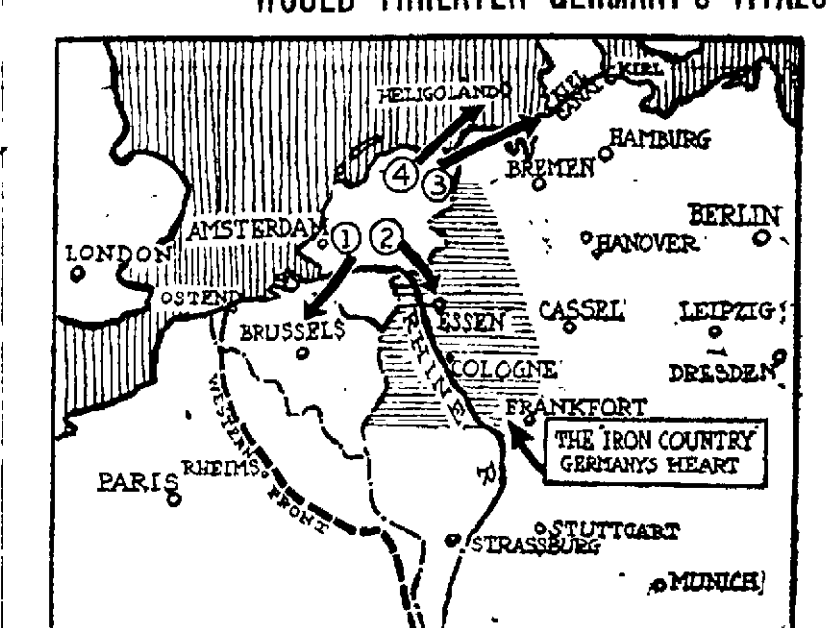

Gus disposed of the pigs—and they'll probably never bother other farmers in Montpelier. He took them to the village butcher and sold them for $25. The porkers were slaughtered but Gus kept the money, failing to explain to his employer just how he got rid of the pests.

MONTANA MAN WANTED
Arley Morrey Charged With Embezzling Price of Farm

Jamestown, N. D., July 19.—Sheriff James H. Ross has left for Glasgow, Mont., where he will take charge of Arley Morrey, wanted on an embezzlement charge in this county. Morrey formerly resided south of Windsor and it is said he sold some land owned by his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. Orse, for getting to turn over the proceeds to the owner.

HOW HOLLAND'S ENTRANCE INTO WAR
WOULD THREATEN GERMANY'S VITALS

1. German lines on western front threatened from rear.
2. Air raids on Krupp plants at Essen and other munition centers, less than 20 minutes airplane flight from Dutch border.
3. Air raids on Kiel canal, less than one hour's flight from Dutch border.
4. British navy, using Holland as a base, would menace Heligoland and other submarine bases.

PUBLICITY NEED FOR RED TRAIL;
TALK OF AGENT

Other Highways Which Are Not
As Desirable Get Business
Because of Boosting

That the Red Trail needs a permanent, energetic publicity Bureau in it is to compete with other transcontinental highways which have far less to offer, but which keep their offerings constantly before the public is the opinion of George N. Kenison, secretary of the Bismarck Commercial club and father of that section of the National Parks Transcontinental highway which passes through North Dakota.

The Yellow trail, the Lincoln highway and other transcontinental routes which cannot compare with the Red Trail in roadbed, points of interest, hotel accommodations, repair facilities and other points are getting the business because they maintain in the east agents who are constantly boosting for these highways. Reports from the Yellow trail are that it is enjoying the biggest season's business in its history. This is thought to be due to the fact that for the last year former Secretary Cooley of the Aberdeen Commercial club has been employed to devote all of his time to Yellow trail publicity. Cooley has enlisted the interest of Twin City men, and Minneapolis and St. Paul people, knowing nothing of the Red trail and its advantages, direct their friends over the Yellow trail.

It is suggested that towns on the Red trail, and especially hotels and garages in those towns which profit directly from tourist travel, subscribe a fund which will maintain during the touring season an open office in the twin cities, in charge of some experienced publicity executive.

The Red trail has the inside track in that it is officially recognized by the National Highway association as the National Parks highway. Seattle, Spokane and Portland have done their share to boost the great transcontinental trail, but a majority of the tourist business originates in the eastern part of the United States, and if the Red trail is to get its share it is urged that it must go to the twin cities, the source of this traffic.

HOW
DECAY SPREADS

ONE BAD apple in a barrel affects all the others.

A decayed tooth, like a bad apple, soon causes decay in the one next to it.

See your dentist regularly so that he can fill those cavities while they are small and prevent decay from spreading. Brush your teeth regularly and thoroughly with an efficient dentifrice and you won't have cavities.

S. S. White Tooth Paste is a pure, wholesome, non-medicated cleanser for which no impossible "germicidal" claims are made. It represents the soundest findings of dental science and is made by the world's best known manufacturer of dental equipment and supplies.

EVER ATTEND AN Auction Sale?

Perhaps 50 per cent, of the Tribune's readers have attended an auction sale some time or other in their life. Some have attended with the thought of buying; others have attended out of idle curiosity, and often the "idle, curious" have been the heaviest buyers

WHAT "vim and pep" that auctioneer used in explaining each and every article. How he told you of this articles worth; he made you believe you wanted it, got you to think you did want it, and perhaps after its purchase you couldn't find a place to put it. That's the way an auction sale works. From 100 to 300 people gather together at a given advertised point, the sale starts, bids are opened, bid follows bid, until finally the article is "knocked down" to you to move your merchandise. It's the modern way, the successful way. A city's leading paper is that city's reflector of its leading merchants. Its advertisements act like a compass, pointing the way to economical and safe buying. No bidding, no stress, no urging to buy—just straight forward announcements of seasonable merchandise.

EVER TRY Tribune Advertising

The TRIBUNE wants you to grow stronger, larger, better

That is why it is going to remind you continually of what can be done by giving your merchandise more publicity. It's anxious to co-operate with you in building a greater business and a Greater Bismarck and one of our staff members will be at your service in a very few minutes.

LIST OF REGISTRANTS IN SELECTIVE DRAFT CONTINUED FROM YESTERDAY

The following serial list of registrants in the selective draft is continued from yesterday. Each person registered should find his own number and keep it in mind until Friday, when the drawing will be made. The list will be continued until the last number, 1,798, is printed. To find his name the registrant first locates the precinct in which he is registered, and then finds it in alphabetical order.

TOBACCO HABIT

EASILY OVERCOME

A New Yorker, of wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and quickly banished with delightful benefit. The author, Edward J. Woods, 1421 M. Station E., New York City, will mail his book free on request.

The health improves wonderfully after tobacco craving is conquered. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. Get rid of that nervous, irritable feeling, no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette, snuff or chewing tobacco to pacify morbid desire.

VERDUN LIVES 90 FEET UNDER GROUND WHILE BOMBARDMENT GOES ON ABOVE

The little theater for soldiers in the underground city of Verdun.

Verdun, France, July 19.—The war has converted Verdun into an underground city. Ninety feet into the earth, beneath the shell-torn area that is still being bombed by huge shells from German 45's, 50,000 civilians and allied soldiers live and enjoy themselves. Verdun, once one of the most imposing cities of northeastern France and one of the four most powerful fortresses on the Franco-German border, exists no longer above the ground. For more than a year it has been lying in ruins and slowly with human habitation, while the Germans kept up their ceaseless, but unavailing pour of shells into the city.

It gave the French defenders time to dig down into the rock and stone beneath the citadel of Verdun and construct another city 90 feet under ground, safe from the constant shell-fire above. The new city now houses the population of Verdun besides soldiers on leave from fighting above. Fifty thousand people go about their daily tasks in the light of electric and oil lamps, and only when the din of battle lets up a bit do they venture above for a short glimpse of sunlight and a snatch of pure air. Every convenience of a modern city, on the earth's surface, can be found here in underground Verdun, even to the little cozy theater, where the soldiers are permitted free to be entertained and distracted from the horrors of the battlefield above.

Yes, we will do almost anything for the poor man, anything but get off his back.—Tolstoi

SOME SHOCK.
Increased beer-brewing for the warm months, and especially "where crops are being harvested," is the announced policy of the British government. This will be shocking to the Prohibition lobby at Washington.—New York World.

There's shock in it for all America outside of Washington, too. We are urged to conserve our grain, that England may eat it. We are even considering giving up our beer, that England may have the grain that goes into it.

According to the above World excerpt, England is going to eat our harvest savings and put her own harvest into beer. It is sure shock for the prohibitionist who has been economizing in order to help feed England and it is a whole earthquake for the American lover of beer.

You needn't shout to prove you're a patriot

STIRRING 'EM UP.

One of these nice little Washington jobs of fooling the people has come to light and sure's too much humor in it to let it pass without notice.

Weren't you all thrilled up on the Fourth of July by those glorious accounts of your navy's battle with submarines that were waiting in force to blow up your transports? Of course you were. Maybe you rushed down to the store and bought a package and a half extra of firecrackers. Anyhow, your patriotism and enthusiasm for war went up to 112 degrees, or you're a stay-behind critter.

Well, the account of that battle and Secretary Baker's congratulations to Secretary Daniels had just about got time to set you to whooping it up, plenty and unusual, when there came an Associated Press cable from England strongly questioning the famousness of that famous victory over those "U-boats in force." As Secretary Daniels' name was attached to the story of the battle, the Washington newspaper boys descended upon the navy department for a look at Admiral Gove's official report, and it appears that Mr. George Creel, head of the publicity board and sort of understudy censor, being three-thirds full of newspaper instinct, had "elaborated" the facts of the admiral's report. The people would get and story on the 4th of July. The people needed something to stir 'em up, and George was no slouch on the stir. "Tis said that you can see Secretary Daniels' Adam's apple running up and down his throat, he's so excited over having feared that story.

Fine stuff. Smells some like Hearst, but it did make a glorious 4th.

MORE ACTION.

Very soon now the active work of building up our selective service army will be started. Camp cities will spring up. Thousands of our sturdy young men will go to them. They will receive military instruction based upon the new science of war far as modified on the bloody fields of France and Flanders. They will become component parts of a mighty machine, prepared to defend this country against attack, no matter from what quarter of the globe it is launched. America will thus have something it has never had before—a real army commensurate with the size, wealth and importance of the country. We will begin to have preparedness in fact rather than in phrase.

Part of our splendid little regular army is already in France. More of our troops are going. Later our new armies will go. If our allies need 100,000 men we will send that many. Nobody is keen to send them. Everyone realizes it is only stern necessity that demands they be sent through submarine infested waters to face the dangers and hazards of battle under the new and terrible conditions. If we could keep them at home with honor to ourselves and faith to our allies, if we could keep them here and still throw the weight of American power against the Germans, we would gladly do so.

The Allies want our troops, but they want American ships and American airplanes more urgently. If we build ships more rapidly than the German submarines can sink them, we can feed and munition our allies. More than that, we can absolutely make null and void the submarine campaign upon which the Germans have pinned almost their last hopes. We can defeat their plans to starve England and France into submission. But building ships—important though it be—is merely a defense against German offensive. If we build airplanes also, we help in a great offensive. We give our allies command of the air. We blind the German army. We make them fumble with their artillery. We make them ignorant of the surprise movements of the allied troops. We make possible the destruction of their supply depots, their railroads and even their bridges across the Rhine. We make more than probable a great retreat to that river, a retreat which may degenerate into a rout. Command of the air thus not only brings victory perceptibly nearer, but also means saving the lives of thousands of allied troops. It means they can do with fewer troops of their own, and hence will need fewer of ours.

All these things—feeding our allies, blinding the enemy, bringing victory close to hand, saving lives of British and French troops—depend upon the energy, the determination, and the speed with which we push through our shipping and aviation program.

Up to now our ship building program has degenerated mainly into fine talk and squabbles about authority. The administration should see to it that there is less argument and more action. There should not be so many reports on the printing presses and more ships on the ways. Unless this is speedily done, time fights on the side of the German U-boats.

So with the aviation program which is now being considered by congress it is to be hoped that the necessary appropriations will be speedily passed. If the end of the year sees a great fleet of ships and a large number of airplanes actually in being, actually in service in our war against Prussian militarism, we will have begun to do our large and necessary part in the task of crushing kaiserism.

Great men always have followers. If they aren't admirers, they're spies.

There's a rumor Germany will wage a 11-war on the United States. She's been only treating us to one so far, eh?

Baldheaded man's idea of waste of energy in wartime—invention of mechanical hair partier just put on the market.

Many persons are prone to over-estimate their ability for pride's sake, but underestimate it when it comes to service.

Arriving at his summer home at Forest Hill, John D. would comment on only one topic—the rain. What's this? Water in the gasoline?

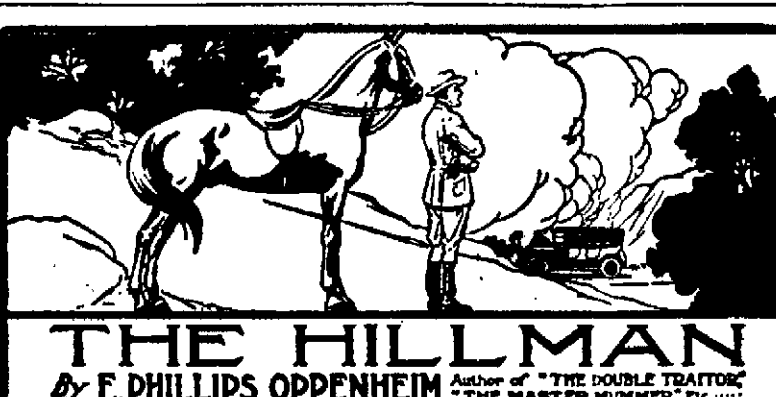

Aguiinaldo's subscription to the Liberty Loan sure shows us is that Filipino hating that with us for world wide democracy, or is he just sarcastic?

Up in the air we can win this war according to Secretary Baker. But that's where congress has been fighting it for the past 90 days and it hasn't scalped a single Teuton.

Having appointed Dr. Michaelis chancellor, the kaiser now can blame the people if Germany loses the war.

Conscience is going to rage, pretty considerably, for a time. Some of our young men are going to discover for the first time in their lives, in many cases, that they have "conscientious scruples." But Washington news is to the effect that the exemption boards are going to require that the conscientious scruples against war service must be shown by the life record and religious faith and performance of the possessor. This will nail conscientious slackers

THE HILLMAN

by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER I.—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her automobile forces.

Louise Maurel, a famous London actress, to spend the night at the farm home of John and Stephen Strangewey.

CHAPTER II.—At dinner Louise discovers that the brothers are woman-hating recluses.

CHAPTER III.—Next morning she discovers that John, the younger brother, has recently come into a large fortune. In company with him she explores the farm.

CHAPTER IV.—In a talk with him she is disturbed by his rigid moral principles and finds that his wealth has created no desire for any other life than the simple one he is leading. She tells him her name and that she is the friend of the prince of Seyre, a rich and disreputable neighbor.

CHAPTER V.—Three months later, unable to rid himself of the memory of the actress and in spite of his brother's protests, John goes to London.

CHAPTER VI.—He finds Louise engaged in the rehearsal of a new play, meets her friends and is entertained at luncheon with her by the prince.

CHAPTER VII.—John drives Sophy home and gives him friendly advice about love and life in London. The prince and Louise postpone a little journey they had arranged for.

"How queer you are!" she murmured. "Listen. You haven't got a wife or anything up in Cumberland, have you?"

"You know I haven't," he answered. "You're not engaged to be married, you have no ties, you came up here perfectly free, you haven't even said anything yet—no Louise?"

"Of course not."

"Well, then—" she began.

Her words were so softly spoken that they seemed to melt away. She leaned forward to look in his face.

"Sophy," he begged, with sudden and almost passionate earnestness, "be kind to me, please! I am just a simple, stupid countryman, who feels as if he had lost his way. I have lived a solitary sort of life—an unnatural one, you would say—and I've been brought up with some old-fashioned ideas. I know they are old-fashioned, but I can't throw them overboard all at once. I have kept away from this sort of thing. I didn't think it would ever attract me—I suppose because I didn't believe it could be made so attractive. I have suddenly found out—that it does."

"What are you going to do?" she whispered.

"There is only one thing for me to do," he answered. "Until I know what I have come to London to learn, I shall fight against it."

"You mean about Louise?"

"I mean about Louise," he said gravely.

Sophy came still closer to him. "Why are you so foolish?" she murmured. "Louise is very wonderful in her place, but she is not what you want in life. Has it never occurred to you that you may be too late?"

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "I believe what the world believes. I believe that some day I think she will admit of four men already present, standing around their hostess and sipping some faint yellow cordial from long Venetian glasses.

Louise came forward to meet them, and made a little grimace as she remarked the change in John's appearance.

"Honestly, I don't know you, and I don't believe I like you at all," she exclaimed. "How dare you transform yourself into a tailor's dummy in this fashion?"

"It was done entirely out of respect for you," John said.

"In fact," the prince added, "we considered that we had achieved rather a success."

"I suppose I must look upon your effort as a compliment," Louise sighed, "but it seems queer to lose even so much of you. Shall you take up our manners and our habits, Mr. Strangewey, as easily as you wear our clothes?"

"That I cannot promise," he replied. "The brain should adapt itself at least as readily as the body," the prince remarked.

M. Graillet, who was one of the three men present, turned around.

"Who is talking platitudes?" he demanded. "I write plays, and that is my monopoly. Ah, it is the prince, I see! And our young friend who interrupted us at rehearsal yesterday."

"Mr. Strangewey," he said, "I congratulate you! Any person who has the good fortune to interest Miss Maurel is to be congratulated. Yet must I look at you and feel myself puzzled. You are not an artist—no? You do not paint or write?"

John shook his head.

"Mr. Strangewey's claim to distinction is that he is just an ordinary man," Louise observed. "Such a relief, you know, after all your clever people!"

John shook hands with everybody and sipped the contents of the glass which had been handed to him. Then a butler opened the door and announced luncheon. Louise offered her hand to the prince, who stepped back.

"It shall be the privilege of the stranger within our gates," he decided. Louise turned to John with a little smile.

"Let me show you, then, the way to my dining room. I ought to apologize for not asking some women to meet you. I tried two on the telephone, but they were engaged."

"I will restore the balance," the prince promised, turning from the contemplation of one of the prints hanging in the hall. "I am giving a supper party tonight for Mr. Strangewey, and I will promise him a preponderance of your charming sex."

"Am I invited?" Louise inquired. The prince shook his head.

"Alas, no!"

They passed into a small dining room and here again John noticed that an absolute simplicity was paramount. The round table, covered with an exquisitely fine cloth, was very simply laid. There was a little glass of the finest quality, and a very little silver. For flowers there was only one bowl, a brilliant patch of some scarlet exotic in the center.

"A supper party to which I am not invited," said Louise, as she took her place at the table and motioned John to a seat by her side, "fills me with curiosity. Who are to be your guests, prince?"

"Calavera and her sprites," the prince announced.

Louise paused for a moment in the act of helping herself to hors d'oeuvres. She glanced toward the prince. For a moment their eyes met. Louise's lips were faintly curled. It was almost as if a challenge had passed between them. Louise devoted her attention to her guest.

"First of all," she asked, "tell me how you like my little friend?"

"I think she is charming," John answered without hesitation. "We went to a supper club last night and stayed there till about half past three."

"Really," said Louise, "I am not sure that I approve of this! A supper club with Sophy until half past three in the morning!"

He looked at her quickly. "You don't mind?"

"My dear man, why should I mind?" she returned. "It is exactly what I hoped for. You have come up to London with a purpose. You have an experiment to make, an experiment in living."

"The greater part of my experiment," he pointed out, "needs the help of only one person, and that person is you."

She moved a little uneasily in her chair. It might have been his fancy, but he imagined that she glanced under her eyelids toward the prince of Seyre. The prince, however, had turned almost ostentatiously away from her. He was leaning across the table, talking to Faraday.

"You have not lost your gift of plain speech," she observed. "So delightful in Cumberland and Utopia, so impracticable here!"

"Then since we can't find Utopia, come back to Cumberland," he suggested.

A reminiscent smile played for a moment about her lips. "I wonder," she murmured, "whether I shall ever again see that dear, wonderful old house of yours, and the mist swayed without hesitation. "We went to a supper club last night and stayed there till about half past three."

this young man from Cumberland." "Well?"

"In him," Graillet went on, "one perceives all the primitive qualities which go to the making of splendid manhood. Physically he is almost perfect, for which alone we owe him a debt of gratitude. He has, if I judge him rightly, all the qualities possessed by men who have been brought up free from the taint of cities, from the smear of our spurious overcivilization. He is chivalrous and unsuspicious. He is also, unfortunately for him, the enemy of the prince."

Louise laid down her fan. She no longer tried to conceal her agitation. "Why are you so melodramatic?" she demanded. "They have scarcely spoken. This is, I think, their third meeting."

"When two friends," Graillet declared, "desire the same woman, then all of friendship that there may have been between them is buried. When two others, who are so far from being friends that they possess opposite qualities, opposite characters, opposite characteristics, also desire the same woman—"

"Don't!" Louise interrupted, with a sudden little scream. "Don't! You are talking wildly. You must not say such things!"

Graillet leaned forward. He shook his head very slowly; his heavy hand rested upon her shoulder.

"Ah, no, dear lady," he insisted, "I am not talking wildly. I am Graillet, who for thirty years have written dramas on one subject and one subject only—men and women. It has been given to me to study many varying types of the human race, to watch the outcome of many strange situations. I have watched the prince draw you nearer and nearer to him. What there is or may be between you I do not know. It is not for me to know. But if not now, some day Eugene of Seyre means you to be his, and he is not a person to be lightly resisted. Now from the skies there looms up this sudden obstacle."

"You do not realize," Louise protested, almost eagerly, "how slight is my acquaintance with Mr. Strangewey. I once spent the night and a few hours of the next morning at his house in Cumberland, and that is all I have ever seen of him. How can his presence here be of any serious import to Eugene?"

"As to that," Graillet replied, "I say nothing. If what I have suggested does not exist, then for the first time in my life I have made a mistake; but I do not think I have. You may not on the hills, and the stars shining here and there through it, and the moon coming up in the distance."

"All these things you will see again," he assured her confidently. "It is because I want you to see them again that I am here."

"Just now, at this minute, I feel a longing for them," she whispered, looking across the table, out of the window, to the softly waving trees.

At the close of the luncheon for a moment she and John were detached from the others.

"I want to see you alone," he said under his breath. "When can I?"

She hesitated.

"I am so busy," she murmured. "Next week there are rehearsals nearly every minute of the day."

"Tomorrow," John said insistently. "You have no rehearsals then. I must see you. I must talk to you without this crowd."

It was his moment. Her half-formed resolutions fell away before the compelling ring in his voice and the earnest pleading in his eyes.

"It will be in," she promised, "tomorrow at six o'clock."

After the departure of her guests, Louise stood before the window of her drawing room, looking down into the street. She saw the prince courteously motion John to precede him into his waiting automobile. She watched until the car took its place in the stream of traffic and disappeared. The sense of uneasiness which had brought her to the window was unaccountable, but it seemed in some way deepened by their departure together. Then a voice from just behind startled her. It was Graillet, who had returned noiselessly into the room.

"Returned," he explained. "An impulse brought me back. A thought came into my mind. I wanted to share it with you as a proof of the sentiment which I feel exists between us. It is my firm belief that the same thought, in a different guise, was traveling through your mind, as you watched the departure of your guests."

She motioned him to a place upon the couch, close to where she had already seated herself.

"Come," she invited, "prove to me that you are a thought reader!"

He sank back in his corner. His hands, with their short, stubby fingers, were clasped in front of him. His eyes, wide open and alert, seemed fixed upon her with the ingenious-inquisitiveness of a child.

"To begin, then, I find our friend, the prince of Seyre, a most interesting. I might almost say fascinating, study."

Louise did not reply. After a moment's pause, he continued.

"Among the whole aristocracy of France there was no family so loathed and detested as the reigns of Seyre at the time of the revolution. Those at the chateau in Orleans and others who were arrested in Paris, met their death with singular contempt and calm. Eugene of Seyre, whose character in my small way I have studied, is of the same breed."

Louise took up a fan which lay on the table by her side, and waved it carelessly in front of her face.

"One does so love," she murmured. "To hear one's friends discussed in a friendly spirit!"

"It is because Eugene of Seyre is a friend of yours that I am talking to you in this fashion," Graillet continued. "You have a friend."

"Beware, Not of the Enmity of Eugene of Seyre, but of His Friendship."

realize it, but there is before you one of those struggles that make or mar the life of women of every age. As for the men, I will only say this, and it is because of it that I have spoken at all. I am a lover of fair play, and the struggle is not even. The younger man may hold every card in the pack, but Eugene of Seyre has learned how to win tricks without ace. I stayed behind to say this to you, Louise. You know the young man, and I do not. It is you who must warn him."

"Warn him?" Louise repeated, with upraised eyebrows. "Dear master, isn't it just a little—do you mind if I use that word so hateful to you—melodramatic? The age of duels is past, also the age of hired braves and assassins."

"Agreed," Graillet interrupted, "but he weapons of today are more dangerous. It is the souls of their enemies that men attack. If I were a friend of that young man's, I would say to him: 'Beware, not of the enmity of Eugene of Seyre, but of his friendship.'" And now, dear lady, I have finished. I lingered behind because the world holds no more sincere admirer of yourself and your genius than I. Don't tangle. May I not let myself out?"

He looked steadfastly into her eyes. His plain, bearded face was heavily-ruled, lined, tired a little with the coming of age.

"You are not going?" she asked him.

SOCIETY

Guest From Robinson.
Mrs. S. O. Seagren of Robinson is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Llesman, 803 Seventh street.

Here from Jamestown.
Dr. and Mrs. T. L. DePuy of Jamestown were visitors in the city this morning, motoring in from their home last evening. They visited briefly with friends here.

Return to Regan.
Mrs. Sidney Harris and son, Gordon, returned to their home in Regan today after a short visit with Mrs. Arthur Bauer of this city. They were accompanied by Mrs. Wilbur Rohrer and family.

Guests at Fargo Wedding.
Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Tracy of this city were guests at the wedding of Miss Emma Miller and Andrew Lee at Fargo yesterday evening. Following the ceremony there was an informal reception to the 50 guests.

Closes Friday.
The rural teachers' summer school, which has been held in Mandan the past month, closes tomorrow. Eighty slope counties are represented and a strong force of teachers has been in charge. J. M. Martin, superintendent of the Bismarck city schools, has been instructor in history, civics, language and grammar. The term this summer has been very successful.

For Miss Anna Floren.
Mrs. S. A. Floren entertained 12 young ladies of the city last evening at her home in honor of her guest, Miss Anna Floren of Minneapolis. Miss Anna Floren is the sister of Mrs. Floren. The evening was spent in a luncheon, while music and a luncheon were pleasant diversions. The color scheme was pink and white. The hostess was assisted by the Misses Helen Lucas and Muriel Floren. An automobile ride later in the evening closed an exceptionally delightful social function.

GOLF TOURNEYS
FOR BISMARCK'S
COUNTRY CLUB

Interesting Program of Events for Season Mapped Out by Tournament Committee

SPECIAL NINE-HOLE
MATCH THIS EVENING

Beginning with a special nine-hole match at 6:30 this evening, with an entrance fee of one golf ball, the stakes to go to the winners, a series of interesting events for the Bismarck Country Club has been mapped out by the tournament committee, which met yesterday and arranged its schedule. The committee members, H. H. Steels, H. P. Goddard and A. S. Holter, predict that the golf season will be one of the best in years. An unusual interest is being shown on the part of devotees, and the new blood injected into the club this spring has brought in some amateurs who are real experts.

Schedule of Events.
The gentlemen's handicap opens August 15. To qualify a player must turn in five cards before August 15. The same rules will cover the ladies' open handicap, except that play will be nine holes, instead of 18, up to the finals. The ladies' committee for the season is composed of Mesdames Vesperman, Cook and W. A. Hughes.

The club team will be open to all members qualifying by August 7. The twenty members must turn in five cards dating from July 1, 1917.

Ringer Score Events.
The ringer score events commenced July 1. To qualify a player must start at tee 1 and play the full round of nine holes. The player must be matched with a player not a member of his family.

In all tournament plays the ball, after teeing off and before holing out, must not be touched except with a club.

For the open championship there will be a one-week qualifying round of 18 holes. It will be played in divisions of 15 each, with one week to each frame of 18 holes, the best 32 to qualify for the finals. The prizes will be the gentlemen's perpetual cup, a second cup and a runner-up cup. Nine prizes in all are offered for the season.

MRS. PORTER PASSED AWAY HERE TUESDAY

Mrs. Bertha C. Porter, wife of Clarence W. Porter, wire chief for the Hughes Electric company, died suddenly here at 11:45 Tuesday afternoon. The services were held in the Lucas undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon. The body was shipped last night to Kenyon, Minn., the former home of Mrs. Porter.

Mrs. Porter is survived by her two sons and three small children, the youngest being a babe of a week. The body was accompanied to Minn. by Mr. Porter. Many friends in Bismarck mourn the untimely loss of Mrs. Porter and are in deep sympathy with the bereaved husband.

Miriam Cooper and Ralph Lewis, stars in "The Birth of a Nation," are starting in "The Silent Lie" at the Orpheum tonight.

In Hospital.
Mrs. George Will has entered the Bismarck hospital, where she will undergo an operation.

Attend Picnic.
Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Shipley and Mrs. Charles Llesman motored this week to Boston, near Tuttle. Mrs. Shipley's former home, where they attended an enjoyable picnic.

Returns from Vacation.
Miss Mabel Anton of the Bismarck hospital staff returned Tuesday from a vacation of three weeks spent in Waterville, la., her home, and various Minnesota points.

Entertains at Tea.
Mrs. C. R. Nelson entertained this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Peck at a beautifully appointed tea. The event was given in honor of Mrs. W. P. Taylor, who leaves Aug. 1 for her home in South Dakota. About 20 ladies were present. The color scheme in decorations was red with a predominance of red carnations and snapdragons.

Auxiliary to Meet Tomorrow.
The Ladies' Auxiliary to Company A will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Commercial club hall. A large attendance is urged, as work will be planned for comfort bags to be made for the soldiers. The bags will contain many little necessities and comforts, such as thread, needles, pins, court plaster, etc. Special attention is called to the fact that this meeting will be held on Friday instead of Saturday, which has been the custom heretofore.

PERSONAL NOTES.
Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Howard of Lincoln are in the city today on business matters and shopping.
Dr. and Mrs. N. C. Grochow of Underwood spent the day in Bismarck today.
Mr. and Mrs. M. Facal of Bismarck were capital city visitors last night and today.
Mr. and Mrs. James B. Kitch of Fort Yates are in the city today.

CITY NEWS

Modified Jockey Cap

By BETTY BROWN.
New York, July 19.—Woman manages to do strange things to man's fashions when she takes them for her own. Give her the lines of a jockey cap, and she enlarges it, befrills it and tags it with ribbon. Then does it and becomes bewitching.

This is a brand new idea in sports hats—for girls only. Matrons would better stick to Panamas.

TRANSFER ORDERED IN.—The railway commission yesterday ordered in a transfer between the Northern Pacific and the Milwaukee lines at Elgin, which was discussed at a hearing held on the ground last week. The board also ordered a crossing established by the Milwaukee line at Bucyrus and Bowman.

STAMP OUT PLAGUE.—Swat the fly and prevent infantile paralysis urges the state board of health, which, in a circular issued this week, calls particular attention to the menace of the flies, of garbage, filth and litter, which produce and nourish flies, in connection with the plague which cost so many baby lives in America last year. Every householder is cautioned to look to his screens and to see to it that debris, manure and other insanitary accumulations are removed from his premises.

With M. H. Cook at the key of a private wire, Adjutant General Fraser now has the world at his desk. Cook is one of the oldest brass punchers in the northwest, having spent 25 years in the game, principally in North and South Dakota. For many years he has handled press reports for the North Dakota assemblies, and he has come to be relied upon as a man who can fill the bill in an emergency. He started in the game in Aberdeen as a kid, and for 14 years he has been familiar to Bismarck patrons of the Western Union.

BASE HIT LOSES GAME.

"Never will I forget a base hit Demmitt got for us against the St. Louis and lost us the ball game," said a White Sox player. "It was beginning to rain when we went to bat the last of the fifth. The score was tied. They tried hard to stall along, but we managed to get a home run, and then they stalled harder than ever."

"Faber came to bat, and, trying to strike out, knocked a dinky grounder the Browns didn't try to field. Red stole second, third and home on three pitched balls, no attempt being made to nail him."

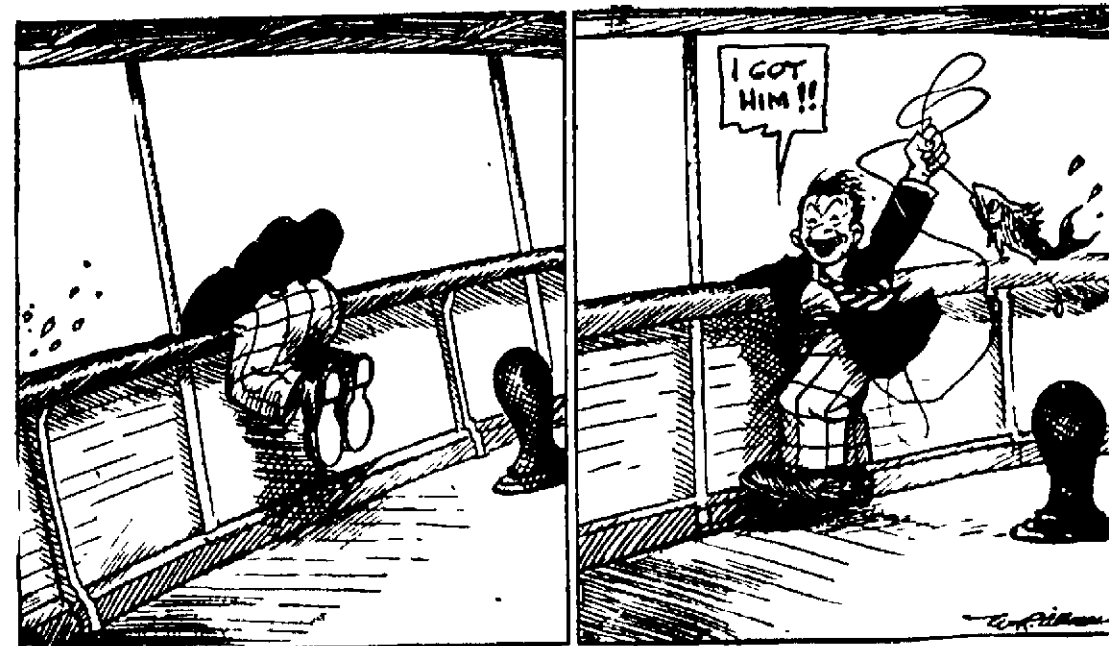

"It was up to Demmitt to fan, for two were out, but instead of doing this, he happened to knock a little roller that went for a single. Then, next instant, it poured so hard the umpires called it off."

"The score reverted and remained a tie. We played it off and lost."

It is an honor to do something for the boys back from the trenches. "I notice you are having trouble with the I. W. W. You ought to ship them over to France as a labor battalion. The Tommies will see that they work. Ship loads of Chinese are going over to release men in the fields. This would be a good way to solve the I. W. W. trouble."

MONEY MAKERS HURT SPORTS

Trouble Arises Between Owner and Player When Discussion of Receipts Is Taken Up.

Grantland Rice says that the influence of money upon sport is bound to be bad. There is no way out. As long as gate receipts continue to grow there is a certainty of ill feeling at hand between those who pay and those who play. It has been suggested that in baseball a good many years ago there was far less trouble between manager and player. This is true. But there was also a run of smaller gate receipts. When admissions run up to 8,000 and 10,000 a day, the gate increases, trouble is sure to keep piling up. The player wants to make all he can get. The owner wants to get all he can make, both sides having the true human touch. There is nothing at all out of the ordinary in all this, since the same conditions exist in every branch of existence. It only seems worse in a game, for everyone likes to think that sport is divorced from financial consideration, whereas in this country sport and the love of watching sport have been capitalized to the limit. The only way out would be to abolish all gate receipts. And this is no way out, for then there would be no daily baseball. So baseball will have to fight its way out, just as various other trades have to scramble along, with a few breathing spells between trouble. Big money has come to the game, and big money means big trouble when discussion of the proper split arises. It may seem to be a shame that a great game should be marred by loud and raucous debate over the division of the spoils, but there are a number of things in this world that seem to be a shame that can't be averted.

Two Sons of Major
M'Laughlin Enlist
With Bismarck Boys

Important additions to Co. I, Bismarck new company in the Second regiment, today were two sons of Major James McLaughlin, for years Indian agent at Standing Rock and prior to that time stationed at Devils Lake. Major McLaughlin, who spent 40 years in the Indian service, chiefly in this state, now is an inspector general of the department of Indian affairs. Mrs. McLaughlin, who shares her husband's fame as a writer, has lived with her boys on the reservation, whence the young men came to day to enlist with the Bismarck company.

Five hours' drill daily now is the program for Co. I. The organization is believed to be one of the huskiest in service in North Dakota. The tallest private is 6 feet 1 1/2 inches, and there are a dozen men within an inch or two of 6 feet or a trifle more.

Every American should see "Afloat and Ashore" of the U. S. Defender, at the Orpheum tonight.

Little Rain: Some Hail Proves Small
Benefit to Crops

A rainfall of five hundredths of an inch, accompanied by some hail, was reported in the Bismarck district last evening. There was not enough hail to greatly damage the crops, nor enough rain to materially benefit them. The shower was effective in cooling the atmosphere last night, but the sun is on duty at the old stand today.

Pembina is one of five stations in the Missouri valley district at which more than an inch of rain was reported yesterday. Pembina's record was 1.10 inches, the heaviest rainfall reported in North Dakota this season. Equally heavy precipitation was noted at three stations in Oklahoma and one in Missouri. At one station in Kansas and one in Iowa three inches of rainfall was recorded yesterday.

Langdon reported 32 inches; Fessenden, 28, and Devils Lake, 12. Bismarck, with 96 degrees, was the hottest spot in North Dakota yesterday. Napoleon and Jamestown each reported 95, while Bismarck, Minot, Fessenden and Pembina reported 94. The coolest spots were Grand Forks and Larimore, with only 87 degrees.

COLEHARBOR MAKES FINE SHOWING IN GAME WITH CHAMPS

All Home Team Holds Bismarck
Down to 4 to 3 Victory—
Runs Bunched in Third

DHAMES SHOWS UP WELL IN INITIAL APPEARANCE

Coleharbor, an all-home aggregation, with no hired players from outside, made a splendid showing against the Champs last evening, when it held the locals down to a 4 to 3 victory on the Bismarck grounds. Bismarck's run-getting was confined to the third inning, when Coleharbor indulged in a little ascension which permitted four men to rump home before the visitors returned to earth. It is doubtful whether any purely local organization in North Dakota can compete with Coleharbor, and Bismarck fans will welcome their return any time.

The run-getting in the fourth came through three hits, one of which was a three-bagger, and two errors on the part of Coleharbor. Hannan, a home boy, pitched a nice game for Coleharbor, but was unlucky in having hits bunched on him. The whole team showed a fast, snappy organization.

Dhames a Star.
"Dutch" Dhames made his initial appearance in a Bismarck uniform, and proved somewhat of a whirlwind, being credited with one run, two hits, three stolen bases and three assists. His one error was excusable.

Christie took Talcott's place at the beginning of the fifth. Both pitched good ball, and the entire team was up to standard, except in the seventh, when the summing of three errors presented the visitors with a run.

SPORT CHATTER

Loss of the first double-header by the Giants this season was a blow. That Matty and his Reds did it, makes it a stab in the back.

The teams are having a livelier time in the cellar than on the roof. If our athletes who have gone to France are mixers they'll bring back with them real interest in the British national game of cricket.

Poor Mike Gibbons, too, will have to bow to the lowly Red, have to box men like Ted Lewis, who's a welterweight, or start a circus.

If it took five years to decide Kohnen was not world's champion runner, how long would it take to break similar news to Jess Willard?

Umpire Emble doesn't need a fortune to look like John D. His wig is enough.

FOR SALE? NOT THESE STARS; MAGNATES SOMETIMES SELL STARS BUT NEVER BIG DRAWING CARDS

By PAUL PURMAN.

If a wise fan you would be, make a couple of mental reservations and grin broadly when you hear a report of the sale of Walter Johnson, Ty Cobb, Grover Alexander or George Sisler.

The idea comes from a report that Washington was about to sell Johnson a few days ago.

Fact is, these four men are unbuyable. Even at the present monumental prices for good ball players practically all figures would be too small to remove one of these men from the club with which he is affiliated.

This is not alone on account of their wonderful playing, more perhaps on account of their drawing power. When Detroit is playing anywhere around the circuit the fan goes primarily to see Cobb in action, secondarily to see the game. In Detroit Cobb's drawing power is inestimable. For that reason Cobb probably will never be put on the market, even though he should slip badly, for so long as he is able to put on a uniform and appear on the field he will be a drawing card.

The same holds with Johnson, Alexander and Sisler.

Washington is a poor drawing club. But receipts are boosted almost 100 per cent when Johnson is slated to pitch. It is not likely Johnson would be sold when he draws as much as the rest of the club combined.

There have been few men in baseball in this category. Mathewson was one. As long as Matty could toe the slab there was no chance of his being sold at any figure.

The status of the club makes a great deal of difference in cases of this kind.

For instance, Speaker was sold by the Boston Red Sox. While Speaker was undoubtedly the star of the club, there were several others not far behind him and the club would afford to take a chance on selling him for the price paid and depend on other stars to make the fans forget.

The breaking up of the Athletics was another example. Never a popular team, Mack found his attendance slipping to a point where he could better afford to dispense with his high salaried players and build up a new organization.

BENNY LEONARD, "CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR," WON'T ENLIST UNLESS HE IS DRAFTED

When will Benny Leonard enlist? It has become a question of more than passing interest, as Benny has twisted and squirmed ever since he made his original announcement of intentions, when he declared he would don the khaki immediately after he won the lightweight title.

Leonard has no intention of enlisting, never had in fact, and will not put on the olive drab unless he is caught by the draft.

Benny will not answer direct questions about enlistment. Folly Gibson, his manager, and some others of his backers, caused him to issue the statement after the Welsh bout, believing it to be "good policy." Whether or not it will prove a boomerang remains to be seen.

Leonard is a socialist, a pacifist and a conscientious objector.

When he went to Washington, ostensibly to consult naval authorities about enlistment, his real object, according to men close to Leonard, was to find out whether political influence would save him from the draft.

Leaving out the consideration of "conscientious objecting," its about time that something was done to prevent a bunch of prize fighters making advertising capital out of patriotic statements which they have no idea of following up.

Bryant Washburn can do something else beside act. He is one of the most expert and enthusiastic fishermen in motion pictures, and that's no fish story either. Mr. Washburn and his company, filming "The Golden Idol," were the first to occupy Essandry's summer encampment at Lake Geneva, Wis. The star owns a $500 fishing outfit which he carried along with him. Before the company chef and his three assistants could even get started to cook the big steaks they Washburn had caught enough fish to make the steaks unnecessary.

He kept the camp supplied with fish throughout the company's stay, much to the disgust of other members of the company, who like a little meat now and then.

"Did you learn how to swim?" Director Arthur Berthelet, in charge of the company, was asked.

"I should have," he replied. "I ate enough fish."

Mr. Washburn's biggest catch was a 20-pound "Muskie," with which he is shown in the picture.

SECOND HELD FOR FEDERAL INSPECTION

Orders From Central Department

Are That Regiment Is Included in Call

MUSTERING OFFICERS

ASSIGNED DISTRICTS

Capt. Leonard S. Hughes, U. S. A., of Fort Logan, Colo., and Captains K. H. Meade, Harry B. Reynolds and Fred J. McAllister and First Lieutenant William A. Beckemeyer, from Fort Riley, Kan., members of the medical reserve officers' corps, arrived last night and today to undertake the medical examinations to be made in connection with mustering North Dakota state troops into federal service. Captain Hughes will remain at headquarters in company with Major Settle, in charge of the muster, and the medical reserve officers will be assigned to the four divisions into which the companies of the First regiment have been assembled for the examination and muster. These assignments will result from a conference now in progress in offices which Major has established in the Northwest hotel building, and the mustering and examining officers probably will begin on their duties tomorrow morning. Major Settle has not yet received any further instructions with regard to the mustering in of the new Second regiment.

Second is Safe.
While the mustering in process which will begin Friday applies only to the First regiment, so far as instructions now in the hands of Major Douglas Settle, chief mustering officer for North Dakota, are concerned, all doubts as to the fate of the new Second regiment were removed last night by the receipt from the central department by Adjutant General Fraser of advice that the inspection of the Second for federal recognition would proceed with all possible dispatch, and that the enlisted personnel of the Second is included in the call and should be held for federal service. The central department advised that if necessary an extension of time for the inspection of the Second will be granted.

Company Reports.
Captains of both regiments have reported from company stations men ranging in number from 67 at Hillsboro in the First to 153 at Wahpeton. Minot in the First is recruited to full war strength, and the two battalions of this regiment not now in federal service reported 1,102 men, which, with the 600 stationed at Fort Lincoln, make the total 1,700.

In the Second, Minot, with 125, reports the largest number of men, a strength of 1,004 enlisted men, or just half war strength, being shown.

Major Settle appointed mustering officers last evening as follows: Lieutenant Albert Behneke, Grand Forks and Grafton companies, Lieutenant Hugo Renden, Hillsboro, Fargo and Wahpeton; Captain J. W. Murphy, Lisbon and Valley City; Captain Robert Wilson, Minot and Williston. Captain C. N. Barker will remain at headquarters.

"All of these state troops," said Major Settle last night, "will be included in the draft Aug. 5, in order that there may be no question as to the president's right to detail them for foreign service."

HOW UNCLE SAM IS TO CONDUCT LOTTERY

Therefore, the question is not 'who shall go first' but who shall be first called up for examination.' And what we must do is to make a list showing the order of examination.

"Now, no one knows how many men must be examined to yield 687,000 soldiers. Therefore, no one can say just how many men it absolutely necessary to put on this list.

"A moment's reflection will prove that the whole 10,000,000 must be given their places on the list of 'order of examination'.

"Every registered man is in a state of uncertainty. He does not know when he will be called. He hesitates to plant a crop for fear he will not reap it. Employers hesitate to engage his services, fearing they will be but temporary. This condition ought to be cured for the repose of the public mind. It can be cured to some extent by putting every man on the list.

"For this reason the whole 10,000,000 names are to be given places on the list of order of examination.

Segregation into Groups.
"Obviously no single agency could examine 10,000,000 men. Therefore the

GEN. PERSHING VISITS BRITISH FRONT

General Pershing is here shown, giving a British adjutant general at the front in France his impressions of 'Tommy' in the trenches. The American commander visited the British lines and returned to Paris.

10,000,000 are segregated into groups of suitable size for convenient examination. There are 4,557 of these groups. For each group a board has been appointed to examine for selection. By far the greater number of these groups consist of approximately 3,000 men.

"Since this is so, our problem is not to put the whole 10,000,000 names in one list arranged in the order of examination. It is to determine the order of examination in each group.

Necessity for Drawing.
"Since all registered men stand in an equality of right and duty, the question of priority can only be determined by lot or drawing. It would be possible to have 4,557 separate drawings—one for each group—but since methods would vary and since supervision and absolute insurance against the charge of fraudulent manipulation could not be had in that way, every consideration of expediency and justice urges one drawing in Washington.

"In each group every registration card has a red inked number written on its face and these numbers run in a single series from unity (1) to the number, corresponding to the greatest number of cards in the group. Normally this is from unity (1) to about 3,000.

"Exact copies of the cards in each group have been attested and sent to the various state capitals. Lists showing the name of each man in each group and the serial number of his card have been posted in the office of the board, published in the press and one copy is on file in Washington. There is therefore, no chance of any man's name being changed without detection, or of any card being lost beyond replacement.

Idea of Central Drawing.
"Suppose there were just 3,000 names and numbers in every group. It is at once apparent that it would be a very simple thing to have a central drawing that would control the order of every name and number in every group of the whole 10,000,000.

Just put 3,000 numbers into a bowl and draw them out one at a time. The first number drawn out would place the 4,557 cards bearing that particular number at the head of every list in the United States. The second would put the cards bearing that number second on all the lists and so forth.

"Now, the thing cannot be done in precisely this way, because there are not precisely 3,000 numbers in every group. But the same idea with a few necessary modifications is the idea on which the present drawing is based.

Drawing by Thousands.
"To draw 10,000 separate numbers would take 10 hours and would multiply the chance of error. Moreover, if the 9-thousands, the 8-thousands, the 7-thousands and the 6-thousands were scattered all over the master list indiscriminately, the cancellation by boards having small groups would be very tedious and would open the way to numerous errors. All this is easily avoided.

"Suppose we drew only 1,000 numbers. We could then provide that the drawing of the numbers 1,578 would also draw the numbers 1,578, 2,578, 3,578, 4,578, 5,578, 6,578, 7,578, 8,578, and 9,578.

"In that way only 10,000 numbers need be drawn, and by making our master list consist of one sheet for each 1,000, we could provide a master list easily applicable to lists with only 3,000 numbers, since such boards could disregard all except the first three sheets.

"We should do this but for the fact that this makes it certain that men in the first thousand would be called first, men in the second thousand next, and men with the high serial numbers last of all.

"Since the assignment of numbers is also done by chance, this does not interfere very greatly with the even chance of all men, but it does interfere to some extent. For this reason it was decided to have one drawing to determine the order in which the sheets of 1,000 each should appear on the master list, instead of arbitrarily assigning the sheets of 1,000 in their natural order. This reduces the whole matter to an absolute equality of chance.

Details of Drawing.
"One group of numbers, from 1 to 1,000 and a second group, from naught to ten have been carefully imprinted on opaque slips of paper, black on one side, counted and checked. These slips have been rolled up and each put inside a gelatine capsule with the black side out. To insure absolute accuracy of count, the capsules containing numbers from 1 to 1,000 have been counted into ten glass jars in groups of 100 each; the glass jars have been sealed and kept in a safe, awaiting the day of drawing.

"The contents of the jars will be decanted into a large glass receptacle, from which the capsules can be readily drawn.

"A blindfolded man will stir the capsules in the receptacle thoroughly before any are drawn, and will keep stirring them during the drawing.

"A blindfolded man will then draw capsules out, one at a time. As each capsule is drawn, it will be handed to an announcer, who will break the capsule and announce the number drawn. While he is announcing the number, a second capsule will be drawn and handed to a second announcer, who will break the capsule and read the number. The drawing will proceed in this way until all the capsules are drawn.

"Three tally sheets will be kept. One keeper of a tally sheet will repeat each number as it is announced and all three will write it down. In case of disagreement between tally sheets on any number, the sheets that agree will control.

"Immediately before the drawing of the numbers from 1 to 1,000 the drawing of the numbers from naught to ten will take place to determine the order in which the thousands shall appear on the master list."

ALL STATE INSPECTORS
TO BE FEDERAL GRADERS
DECLARES DR. LADD

Seeks Ample Protection for Buyer and Seller by Bolstering Up New Law

Every North Dakota state inspector under the new grain grading law, which went into effect July 1, will also be a federal grain inspector, if present plans of the state grain grading department are successful.

Dr. E. F. Ladd, in charge of the department, and J. A. McGovern, chief deputy inspector, have already made application for appointment as federal inspectors.

There are approximately 2,200 elevators in North Dakota, and it is planned to have a state inspector for each elevator. Application will also be made to have each one of these state inspectors appointed as federal inspectors.

Federal Grades.
Under this system all North Dakota grain will carry the official federal grade when it leaves this state.

"It will make it possible to carry the federal inspection from the primary to the terminal market," said Dr. Ladd yesterday.

"This will give ample protection to both buyer and the seller of grain. If the farmer is dissatisfied with his grade, he can appeal to the state grain grading department at the Agricultural college. If the buyer is not satisfied with the grade which is placed on the grain at the primary market, he can appeal to the federal inspectors at the terminals for a regrading.

"The North Dakota Grain Grading department has already adopted the federal grades as the official standard grades for North Dakota. The next step is to have the state inspectors officially named as the representatives of the federal government and this will give the North Dakota grades the official backing of the United States government."

ARREST THREE FOR GAME AND ROBBERY

Three Russian section hands, whose names are unpronounceable, as well as unspellable, were arrested this morning in connection with a poker game in their quarters, south of the Northern Pacific tracks, said to have been held last night, and which culminated in the robbery of one of the gang of his purse, containing upwards of $75.

The trio are being held at the police court, where their case will be disposed of later in the day.

A silver mesh bag and two trunk keys were found by the police this morning. The owner or owners may get them at the station.

COMMISSION ISSUES BONDS FOR PAVING

People Near Broadway and Tenth
Object to Odors From Paving Concern's Plant

The city commission met in regular session at the city hall last evening. Resolutions were passed authorizing the execution and delivery of $300,000 paving bonds on paving district No. 2 fund. These funds will be used to pay the Ford Paving company for current work. Other resolutions were also drawn authorizing the execution and delivery of $11,420 bonds on the paving district No. 1 fund. This will reimburse the Hanlon & Oakes paving concern.

Richard Penwarden appeared for the community in the vicinity of Broadway and Tenth streets and pleaded relief from the alleged nuisance created by the Ford Paving company's asphalt plant. It is said that when the wind blows in the right direction the odor from the plant is highly obnoxious. No action was taken in the matter.
